(Q = Attorney Question; A = Witness Answer)

Q. Explain that [the concept of discipline measures not outlined in the faculty handbook] to me again.

A. Just some things I know Dean Greene did to a faculty member once. He gave the faculty member a class at night, and then 8:00 the next morning for the faculty member to start doing the things he was supposed to be doing. That's an example.

Q. And so what are you telling me about that?

A. There are just other things, depending on the faculty member [emphasis added] -- let's see, that was in the '70s when Dean Greene did that. That particular faculty member didn't like to get up.

Q. So you're saying that assigning a punitive work schedule was one of the methods by which you could discipline a –

A. That's something that Dean Greene did.

Extract 2

“[O’Brien] paused, and for a moment assumed his air of a schoolmaster questioning a promising pupil: ‘How does one man assert his power over another, Winston?’ Winston thought. ‘By making him suffer,’ he said.”

“‘You asked me once,’ said O’Brien, ‘what was in Room 101.’ ... ‘The worst thing in the world,’ said O’Brien, ‘varies from individual to individual [emphasis added]. It may be burial alive, or death by fire, or by drowning, or by impalement, or fifty other deaths. There are some cases where it is some quite trivial thing, not even fatal.”
