

As the Cabal Schemes

As the plotting, planning, scheming, shuffling, and obfuscating continues at a rapid pace in the Economics area in the College of Business, the junta gets more scared, more agitated, and more desperate. More reports will be forthcoming before the Christmas break about some of the events involving the Eco cabal. Feeling all the perceived power, money, and influence slipping away and not being able to stop it is causing some cabal members to step up their efforts. Some skulk to the Provost's office seeking comfort and receive none. Some are trying to mischaracterize routine events as administrative oppression of the Shelby-type in hopes of garnering support for the Eco cabal cause. Like students who spend hours thinking of a way to cheat and preparing to cheat instead of studying for the test, the Eco faction would have been, and still would be, better off doing their jobs instead of wasting time and energy on hopeless pursuits. Fighting is now futile; accept your fate.
