

Carter Still Up to Old Tricks

Long-time EFIB chair George Carter may be done with administration given the CoB's recent reorganization, but that didn't stop him from tossing one more uneven course schedule out to his friends and administration sycophants. The snapshot below from the fall 2009 course schedule guide for ECO shows that Akbar Marvasti continues to be a Carter favorite in terms of the scheduling game.

As the insert above indicates, Marvasti knocks out a whole section of ECO 336 (International Economics) on Tuesday afternoon (2:25 to 5:10pm) and another on Tuesday evenings (6:30 to 9:15pm). Add to these the following little gem.

This is a late afternoon Monday (3:30 to 6:15pm) section of ECO 672 (International Economics) that nobody is (apparently) going to sign up for, meaning that we have the makings of a 2-course load disguised as a 3-course load. Even if the course does "make," Marvasti is free from teaching on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday. In other words, he has a built-in 5-day weekend every week from late August through early December. Never mind, of course, that USM is a residential school and students want to take day (i.e., 8am to 2pm) classes if possible (and, it is possible). Again, this is all about Marvasti's life, not that of the USM b-school student.
