

CAUTION: Watch Your Back

We'll take a day off from the series, Ethics, Power, and Academic Corruption to report on a recent visitor, Association De Gestion Ecole Centrale Delectroniqu, Paris, Ile-de-france, France. The visitor was interested in Sami Dakhlia, a one-time faculty member at the University of Southern Mississippi. Whoever found him at usmnews.net, may be having problems with him, too. A number of his former colleagues might recommend caution when dealing with Mr. Dakhlia. A popular description: "bushwhacker."

A previous usmnews.net report is worth repeating today. At that time, someone was also interested in learning more about Sami Dakhlia:

As you can see, a visitor to usmnews.net recently reviewed reports about Sami Dakhlia, possibly looking into his background. Or, maybe it was Sami, himself.

If that's you Sami, are you behaving yourself? If it's not Sami, read on.

"Warning" should be tattooed on Dakhlia's forehead, followed by, "If Sami doesn't like what you have to say, he's intolerant and he may conspire behind your back to bushwhack you and punish you for your speech."

In an academic environment where open and free discussion is prized, Sami prefers a "Gulag" approach to people he disagrees with. Rather than discussing problems he has with people he disagrees with, he prefers to secretly organize like-minded intolerant miscreants to punish "Dakhlia forbidden speech."

Watch out for this guy. And, especially watch your back.

In previous usmnews.net reports, authors surmised Dakhlia employed bushwhack to curry favor of influential colleagues and administrators to gain tenure when it was questionable whether he might satisfy tenure standards on the basis of merit. See the following reports.
