

It's Been More than One Month Dr. Davis

CoB Faculty Still Await Tables I, II, and IIa

So, Dr. Donna gets a course-release to serve as the CoB's SEDONA Coordinator. As part of that duty, Dr. Davis is expected to produce a small set of tables containing faculty production "data" (teaching, research, etc. summaries) to go along with the CoB's AACSB Reaffirmation efforts, which we hear are going quite well. The only issue seems to be Dr. Davis' inability to produce electronic copies of these (3) tables for distribution to CoB faculty. The existence of these three mysterious tables is explained via a 24 August 2006 e-mail to CoB faculty, Jay Grimes, and Joan Exline. That e-mail is presented below:

Attached is a draft of the AACSB materials we are sending to Dean Cummings prior to his visit next week. The document is an early draft of the AACSB materials we will be submitting prior to our February visit. Clearly the draft is not meant for outside circulation, but I wanted everyone to have a copy to review prior to Monday's visit. You will notice that Tables I, II, and IIa are missing. We had hard copy to include in the materials we sent out, but do not yet have an electronic copy that we can distribute via email. We will get copies to the department chairs tomorrow, and if Donna can produce electronic copies we will distribute those. We will need everyone to check the data we have for you in the tables for accuracy. We know the data are not yet perfect, but we are making progress.

As you can see, more than one month has passed and Davis is still apparently unable to deliver Tables I, II, and IIa that contain the data. Doty queried Davis at the CoB faculty meeting in late August, and Davis offered a weak response, stating something to the effect that "we're still trying."

Given the latest revelations about George Carter's assertion in an AACSB document that use of Minitab will solve shortcomings in stats classes, CoB faculty deserve to see these missing tables.
