

Dear USMnews:

There is a posted job opening for an associate dean for the College of Business for the Coast. Is this the end for Beth LaFleur and Ken Zantow in administration? While Zantow has proven his complete lack of administrative abilities, it is believed by some that LaFleur is not as inept. Is this simply moving them out without apparently firing them? Do you have any insight into this move by Dean [Lance] Nail? Where is all the money coming from to make these hires?

[name withheld]

USMNEWS.net Note: The growth of the Martha Saunders and Lance Nail administrations, even during this struggling economic situation, has been well documented here. We invite everyone to peruse reports over the past academic year for stories about growth at both administrative levels.

Dear usmnews:

With an impending AACSB visit in the fall for the College of Business at Southern Miss, why are two administrators going to British Studies and others taking long vacations? Do they have everything that under control?

Anon