

DEAR USMNEWS.NET

Dear usmnews.net,

Looks like men's basketball is teetering on the edge of NCAA postseason requirements.

Unless Tyndall can get the graduation rate up, there is no postseason for men's basketball moving forward. NCAA grad rates listed below:

The NCAA states on its website: "In order to compete in the 2013-14 postseason, teams must achieve a 900 multi-year APR or a 930 average over the most recent two years. The same standard was in place for the 2012-13 academic year. This standard will increase to a multi-year 930, which predicts to a Graduation Success Rate of approximately 50 percent, or a 940 two-year average APR for the 2014-15 postseason.
