Dear usmnews.net,

I saw the following on one of the Southern Miss sports chat rooms. Looks like some of the fans are coming around to your point of view.

At any rate, the madness has to stop at some point and the big powers at USM will have to decide whether or not they want to continue to invest tens of millions of dollars into 3 different failing sports that seem to fall further and further behind the pack with each passing year. Where is the return on investment?

What no one says is instead of wasting money on sports that few people care to see, the money could be put to better use trying to climb out of the bottom [academic] tier.
