Dear usmnews.net,

Faculty have been discretely discussing your recent articles about increased fees and broken universities. Southern Miss [administrators] will continue to spend money like a drunken sailor who is on his first shore leave in months. [They are] spending money, seemingly without thought, for sports teams and facilities that few care about [or use]; buildings [paid for with borrowed money, and increased fees] for a declining student population; an increasingly inbred faculty; a president who apparently never published a single scholarly paper; and the list goes on. Few have any doubt that Southern Miss is badly broken.
