Dear usmnews.net,

I'm surprised you haven't commented on Charles Jordan's retirement. Any thoughts?

Dear Name Withheld,

Of course there is Jordan's publication history overly represented by tedious studies of accounting standards amendments. And much of his work is repetitive/redundant, perhaps in an effort to "pump up" his research credentials. Some have observed that Charles Jordan is the undisputed champion of publishing in questionable journals.

However, I can't help but think about accounting professor Charles Jordan's seeking permission to copy (after the fact), "without proper citation," Central Missouri State University's AACSB definitions (for participating and supporting faculty). Yes, you read that correctly – "without proper citation," and these are Jordan's own words describing the CoB's attempt to mask the origin of much of its AACSB documentation. Why didn't Jordan run the words through his head first? Let's see: "without proper"="improper"; "improper"="not right"; finally, "not right"="wrong". Something as simple as this little exercise should have prevented Jordan from initiating what usmnews.net's reporters dubbed Jordan's "secret permission expedition."
