

Dear usmnews.net

Dear usmnews.net,

Recently, while looking through a box of old college memorabilia, I found the legal documentation associated with my dealings with D Harold Doty at the University of ***** in the early ****s. This made me want to research the jerk and I came upon your articles associated with him. I would love to say I was shocked but I am not. Honestly, I hadn't really thought of him or that situation in almost 20 years. Your articles did, however, give further validation to my arguments as to why I did not want him to be my academic advisor. I praise the University of ***** and [my Dean] for taking my complaint seriously and I am sure I was one piece of the puzzle that resulted in his termination from the University. He spoke of academic dishonesty on his part while at school in Texas. His demeanor and actions could only be described as an arrogant male who had little desire to advise [me], which he had the audacity to say to me. I am, however, shocked that he is still being employed by universities all over the US. Looks like he doesn't last long at any of them, though. It was a good read for me to see that he has not changed over the years. I wish all the best to UT Tyler and glad to see that USM is no longer dealing with him. Definitely a lawsuit waiting to happen on so many levels. ... And I do ... want to remain anonymous. He's such a loose cannon and I definitely do not want to rehash the past. I applaud you for your efforts in continuing to expose him.

Name withheld by request

In keeping with the writer's request, usmnews.net has deleted personal references so that s/he cannot be identified.