

EaglePost and Southern Miss – Proud Partners in SMTTT

We recently had reason to visit “EaglePost, Where Southern Miss Fans meet on the net!”

EaglePost posters are anonymous. They are the product of Southern Miss education and are proud Southern Miss alums. Southern Miss is proud of them, too. Here’s what makes EaglePost and The University of Southern Mississippi so pleased with their mutual affiliation.

EaglePosters language bespeaks EaglePost and Southern Miss intelligence. Here’s how they employ reason and language:

“F--- this, f--- that. Who the f--- does he think he is. F--- her. F--- him.”

“S--- this, s--- that. He’s not worth a s---. He doesn’t know s---. She doesn’t know s---.”

And their respect for women is another proud association for The University of Southern Mississippi. An example of an EaglePost avatar is placed on a separate page. If you do not wish to view the picture, please do not go to page 2 of this report. (Certainly it is not the most explicit among EaglePost avatars. However, as a matter of courtesy to our readers we are providing an opportunity to not to view the picture.)

Of course, EaglePost-ers must think their language is right for children. EaglePost is a public website. Children, their children, might visit the website. It seems as though they are not in a position to complain when their children visit their or similar websites. Well, come to think of it, their use of obscene language and T & A female avatars may explain their posting in anonymity. They don’t want their children, wives, or mothers to know what they’re doing.

We were under the impression, read in USM rules and regulations, somewhere, that USM affiliations like EaglePost are supposed to have permission from President Saunders and the IHL. We have to assume they do.

SMTTT! Right EaglePost-ers?

But SMTTT of what?
