

GH Chatter

According to talk, life in JAG in summer 2010 will be chaotic. The CoB's graduate services people are apparently moving into the old economics administration suite. Decision scientists are being moved around all over the place. Economists are vacating, with some going home. Accounting is moving to the top floor. Skip Hughes is setting up shop in the grad director's space. There is also discussion of redecorating and construction projects.

Some interesting recent chatter about outgoing CoB economist William Gunther. It seems he completely vacated his office during the last official week of class meetings. There is even some talk that he turned in his office keys. Does this mean he blew off finals, or gave them early? Interesting stuff. In other ECO news, outgoing professor Edward Nissan will be moving over to the CoAL this fall 2010 in a volunteer-type capacity. The word is that he will have an office and some support, in return for volunteering in the international development and political science area.

GH Chatter is a series at USMNEWS that provides a glimpse at what CoB students, and sometimes CoB faculty, are discussing throughout the corridors of Joseph Greene Hall and beyond.
