

GH Chatter

This is the time of the semester when students often request recommendation letters from CoB faculty. It seems that some faculty in management and marketing are directing that students write the letters themselves, and, when finished, present them to the respective faculty for signatures. Of course, this response is not meeting with glee from those CoB students on the receiving end of the directive, who see it as further evidence that CoB faculty are lazy and overpaid.

Judging from the sparse crowds around Greene Hall lately, one would guess that some CoB faculty have already checked out for the semester. Exams are scheduled to begin on 7-Dec-07, yet some CoB faculty are already talking about all of the "early finishers."

GH Chatter is a series at USMNEWS that provides a glimpse at what CoB students, and sometimes CoB faculty, are discussing throughout the corridors of Joseph Greene Hall.
