

GH Chatter

There has been some talk that tourism management will not be a separate academic area after the coming year (2010-11). That would mean that Catherine Price is entering her final year as chair of the department. Chatter has it that TM will be absorbed by management, much like international business was a short time ago. One would think that going from a separate area to a minor part of MGT would mean that some TM faculty will be eliminated.

Judging by some of the chatter, the b-school faculty are enjoying the absence of economists in Greene Hall. That is not really surprising. Under George Carter, the economists were more like thorns than feathers in the CoB's cap. Speaking of former CoB economists, talk is that Edward Nissan is getting a retirement office over in the English department's area of the liberal arts building.

GH Chatter is a series at USMNEWS that provides a glimpse at what CoB students, and sometimes CoB faculty, are discussing throughout the corridors of Joseph Greene Hall and beyond.
