

Glancing Back

Two years ago, here was how the Harold Doty administration handed out the booty. How did they do?

BAC Professors: Jon Carr - good choice; his best publications came in the next two years

Stan Clark – status quo; Morgan, BAC, whatever.

Zaher Hallab – left for another job the next year.

Farooq Malik – was ‘transformed’ to Finance and moved to Hattiesburg.

Akbar Marvasti – only George Carter knows what he is up to now.

Charles Sawyer – retired and moved on to TCU.

Mike Vest – cruising toward retirement in 2008; it worked to get him to be UPC chair.

Partnership Society Professors: Brigitte Burgess – good choice.

Sami Dakhliya – a waste of resources given low production.

Talai Osmonbekov – good choice; so good he is departing for Northern Arizona.

Joe Peyrefitte – prelude to more pay as interim associate dean. If he returns to faculty, how long will it take to revive his research?

Morgan Professorship in Accounting: Charles Jordan – see Stan Clark.

McCarty Professorship in MIS: Chang-Tseh Hsieh – is it perpetual? Perhaps it may be time to shift it to a new hire as an extra incentive?

Kaetsu Professorship in IB: Alvin Williams – does “ownership” interest shift to Farhang Nirroomand in the fall of 2008 (assuming no one has made him a dean)?

Max Draughn Pharmaceutical Sales Professorship: Mike Wittmann – no choice, but he is working to get students jobs. Is this a research professorship?

Banking Professorship: Stephen Haggard – decent choice on merit, but soon departed from the CoB war zone. Hired as the new “banking guy”, but never taught it.

Matthew Hood – incentive for a nice guy, but banking? Note to new dean: can you find the Parham Bridges Chair of Real Estate anywhere? Where did all the money go, if it is not there?

Economic Professorship: Edward Nissan – the eternal cry remains – “We can’t upset Ed”. Why is that again? Almost everyone else seems to be fair game for being upset in the CoB.

Center for Financial Services: John Clark – payment for services rendered to Doty and Carter.
No “Center”, no need for this payment. Perhaps this could be used as an incentive for new hires.
