

Do 'Good' Business Schools Publicize Their Faculties' Research?

2006 Business Week Ranking	Name	Vitas Public On B-School Website?
1	University of Pennsylvania (Wharton)	Vitas generally publicized via links to individuals websites.
2	University of Virginia (McIntire)	Selected Publications generally available.
3	University of Notre Dame (Mendoza)	Selected Publications available.
4	Massachusetts Institute of Technology (Sloan)	Selected Publications available for approximately half of faculty.
5	Emory University (Goizueta)	Selected Publications available.
6	University of Michigan (Ross)	Vitas generally publicized via links to individuals websites. Selected Publications available. Most faculty appear to have vitas publicized.
7	New York University (Stern)	All research is available for viewing.
8	Brigham Young University (Marriott)	Selected Publications available. Most faculty appear to have vitas publicized.
9	University of Texas (McCombs)	Research is generally available for viewing via departmental websites.
10	Indiana University (Kelley)

All business schools listed had links for "Faculty Research" that highlighted School-Wide publications as a group. Additionally, most faculty had their own websites containing that faculty member's Curriculum Vita.

At the USM College of Business, only one department (Economics, Finance, and International Business) has selected publications available for viewing directly on the College website. Accounting and Information Systems, Management and Marketing, and Tourism Management have no such information available.

The USM Library's website has discontinued its tracking of faculty publications.