A LOOK AT WHAT FACULTY ARE DOING TO ESCAPE THE COB

Former CoB economics professor Charles Sawyer's journey since leaving the CoB after the 2006-07 academic year has been an interesting one. Sawyer joined Texas Christian University's ADDRAN College of Liberal Arts in August of 2007 as its Hal Wright Professor of Latin American Economics.

Sawyer's 530-mile move to Fort Worth was full of twists and turns. One of these was discovered only recently by USMNEWS.net staff while researching updates to USMNEWS.net's brain drain series. That discovery came via information contained in Sawyer's recent International Trade & Finance Association 19th International Conference Working Papers publication in 2009 (see below).

Apparently, if the insert above is any indication Sawyer plans on spending the second part of his academic career (the TCU part) as "William C. Sawyer," and not as the "W. Charles Sawyer" that spent 25 years in USM's business college. Having now two separate entries in this recurring series, Sawyer appears to be doing more than most to escape his past in USM's CoB.
