

Perks for Buds XII

Time to make George happy . . . again

As the EFIB faculty plod toward their first departmental faculty meeting this fall, it is time to placate old George Carter, again, about being the lone sailor on deck. Heaven forbid the faculty members would actually have a legitimate say in their own departmental governance. When they did once before (please see the numerous previous posts on this topic), George kept fussing until he had a re-vote rigged for his personal success. Old George has many of the same sheep he believes are friends still in the fold, so they will probably vote for the “Chair only” option of governance. Why would they have a thought about anything but themselves? Those too many sheep, combined with a number of new faculty members, should allow George what the vast majority of the CoB – faculty and staff - hopes is his last tour of duty as EFIB Chair. If the truth was known, Dean Lance Nail could have a major surge in popularity (not that he needs it) by replacing George much sooner than June 30th. What remains right now, as it has ever been, is yet another perk for buds.
