

Looking for a New Dean

So many college and university visitors who come to usmnews.net are looking for information about D. Harold Doty, a past-Dean of the College of Business at USM, that we have a difficult time believing he's applying to so many schools and so soon after moving to Tyler, Texas. However, from time to time we have enough information to make a cross-check. (As we know, barely a year after he arrived in Hattiesburg, he was hunting for a new dean's job.) Here are the results of a recent "click" on usmnews.net looking for Doty:

Lo and behold, look who's looking for a dean:

Dean / College of Business Administration

Central Michigan University (CMU) invites applications and nominations for the position of Dean, College of Business Administration. CMU seeks an exceptional leader with a strong record of academic and professional accomplishment, as well as engagement with the business community, to serve in this key leadership position. The new Dean will have the opportunity to lead and engage the College in a significant era of education and service for both its students and the broader community within the setting of a dynamic university.

Here's a recommendation to Dean Doty. Stay put for a while and focus your attention on building a solid college of business. Stop the incessant job search and application to every dean's job advertised.
