

Things Stay the Same, Things Stay the Same

Though SAIS director Steven Jackson and accounting professor Roderick Posey may now be touting their Spring/Summer 2008 publication in the Journal of Business & Economic Perspectives, USMNEWS.net has learned that the accomplishment is weakened by factors other than the relative obscurity of the journal itself. The insert below shows that three of the CoB's accountants, including Jackson, serve on the JBEP's editorial review board.

The first name under the "Accounting" heading in the insert above is Stan Clark, a professor of accounting at USM. The sixth name in that same column is Steve R. Jackson, the CoB's interim SAIS director. Jackson's previous employer was Loyola University of New Orleans. He represents the only "victory" in former CoB dean Harold Doty's post-Hurricane Katrina raid of the N.O. academic community. Finally, the eighth name in the list above is CoB accounting professor Charles Jordan. Surely having 21% of the ACC portion of the JBEP's editorial review board accounted for by CoB accountants did not hurt when Jackson and Posey went to submit their paper, "Use of Sunk Costs in Decision-Models and the Impact on Teaching," to the University of Tennessee at Martin-based journal.
