

After All the Years of Working Together, Does Niroomand Go Along With Nissan's (Mis?)Representation?

What is Farhang Niroomand's role in his frequent and long-time coauthor's, Edward Nissan's, representations that he was a "visiting as academic scholar in 2011" at the London School of Economics? Are they both playing fast and loose with claims to make them appear more important as academics and researchers than they really are?

We learned that Ed's colleagues throughout the years were unable to confirm his representations about connections to the London School of Economics.

Search for Edward Nissan, Visiting Academic or Edward Nissan, Visiting Scholar and you find the response "0 search results." Nissan's wording, "visiting academic scholar in 2011" is also in not listed.

Tell us you don't know about this, Farhang. Please feel free to write and let us what you know about Ed's representations.