. . . article in sun herald this morning talked about a meeting he had with students and faculty at gulf park campus. Student/government president down here is quoted as saying that she's been trying to get Bennett down here since February to discuss some issues but had not gotten a response. This meeting was supposed to be just Bennett and faculty, the student/government president saw the opportunity to rally the students while he was on campus.

This is troubling because didn't Bennett say that the gulf park campus was our ace in the whole, or diamond in the rough, or secret weapon, something like that? In other words, if he was so high on gulf park, why are reading that he's been completely inaccessible until now when he was essentially cornered by the student body?

I don't understand why he's not down here on the coast once a week for half a day- just walk around the campus, be seen, and talk to the students, let them know that you're interested in how things are going, etc.
